Red Skelton:
A Career at Stake

Monday—back on TV!

a New Dennis Day

star of the RCA Victor Show

Dennis is back on the air—in and out of trouble. Plenty of laughs, plenty of songs, plenty of fun for all! Every Monday night for a full half-hour.

See him on NBC Television

as we see it

The big news in automobile circles has to do with sports cars, those sleek, streamlined affairs that perform so well and are so handsome to look at. Many of the major manufacturers have started pilot production, and new models will appear in dealers' showrooms between now and mid-1954. Prices will be high to start with. They will continue high until there is enough demand from consumers to bring mass production methods into the sports car field.

Meanwhile, even though the Nation's drivers know that the trend is toward lower, smarter-looking automobiles, hundreds of thousands of standard models are being sold. The buyers need transportation—now—and not too many are prepared to pay a premium in order to be the first sports car owner on the block.

Just about the same situation exists in the television industry. The news is color TV—yes, it's beautiful. Manufacturers are even now planning their models, ordering supplies and components, preparing to introduce new lines of color receivers. A few sets may be displayed by the end of this year. By mid-1954, most dealers will be taking orders. The sets will have a 14-inch picture. They will sell for something between $850 and $1200. Consumer demand and mass production eventually will bring the prices down.

And, meanwhile, those of us who need a television set, to watch television now, can't go wrong by buying a standard black-and-white receiver.

We'd all like to have color television in our homes, just as many of us would like to have a sports car in the garage. But it would be foolish to deny ourselves today's television programs in order to wait for color, just as it would be foolish to deny ourselves transportation now in order to wait for a reasonably-priced sports car sometime in the future.

Skelton and friends: the kids love Red's comedy and CBS is betting you will, too.

Skelton Tries Again

Red's Staking His Career On His New CBS Show

GENE FOWLER, one of the more literate of an older generation's newspapermen, once made the sage observation that television is a glass furnace. As an afterthought, he added that no one had been so badly burned by it as Red Skelton. Fowler should know. He is the best friend Skelton has in this world.

One recent day, the big red-headed comedian sat wearily on a day bed in his room at the Hotel Sahara in Las Vegas. He was being paid $50,000 to do two shows a night, three on Saturdays, seven days a week for two weeks. By the time the government got through with this rather large sum of money, Skelton had roughly $6000. Or rather, his business manager had it. The only money Skelton ever sees face to face is the $200 doled out to him each week for pocket money. He has big pockets.

He was tired this afternoon. The temperature outside was 114, but the Sahara is air conditioned. Skelton had just been pulled bodily out of a three-hour catnap, the first sleep he had had in 48 hours. He looked around him with an air of sleepy bewilderment, an unlighted cigar sticking out of his face.

"Why did you let me sleep?," he asked, a little petulantly, of nobody in particular. "I had a four o'clock appointment. I don't like to break appointments. Why didn't you wake me up?"

Still half asleep, he leaned back against the wall and rubbed his eyes. "Nobody tells me anything," he complained. "Except what to do. They tell me what to do but they never get around to telling me why. I was 40 years old last Saturday. I'm a big boy now. I'm going to make my own decisions for a change. I'm going to get what I want, do what I want to do. And there are going to be some changes around here, boy.

"Y'know, it's a terrible thing about this television. In my first year I used up around 350 pieces of material. Thirty years' worth of stuff—all burned up. We'd take a tag from this sketch and the middle from that sketch and the opening from some other sketch and stick it all together and call it a show. What a terrible thing."

Red rubbed his eyes again and stared mournfully at the floor. "Aw, the heck with it," he said. "Let's go do the 8:30 show."

Triumph For Skelton

Skelton "killed" all the people at the 8:30 show. He "killed" all the people during his entire two-week stand, breaking the Sahara's attendance record with room to spare and reveling in the sheer joy of meeting an audience face-to-face for the first time in almost 13 years. It was an eye-opener to the comedian, and it was an eye-opener to those responsible for his TV show for the new 1953-54 season. They knew their man still had it, despite the fiasco of last season's Skelton show.

Oddly enough, the act Skelton put on at the Sahara was 99 percent old stuff—routines he had done on TV, in the movies and on personal appearances. The audience screamed for his "Guzzler's Gin" and Skelton did "Guzzler's Gin" for approximately the 1400th time and the audience all but rolled on the floor from laughing.

Needs New Material

But it's equally odd that Skelton no longer can do "Guzzler's Gin" on television. He's done it, the viewer has seen it—and the viewer doesn't want to see it again. He wants something new and different. This same viewer will go to the Sahara and laugh himself silly watching Skelton do the "Guzzler" in person, but he'll snort impatiently the minute he sees it coming back for a repeat on TV.

Skelton's problem, then, is to find new material. He once said he would never run out of material, that he had hundreds of bits and sketches left over from the old vaudeville days, but he's since changed his tune.

Skelton's other problem is himself. He is a big, likeable clown, a big extroverted kid who loves nothing better than to make people laugh. His great trouble has always been in not knowing when to stop. He's been known to devote two solid hours to taping a single half-hour radio show before a studio audience, tossing the script to the winds, ad libbing furiously, tying his fellow performers into knots, rendering the audience virtually insensible with laughter—and winding up in an alley outside the studio being sick to his stomach.

Last year it all caught up with him. Skelton was a sick man when the season started. For some reason, he got the idea that doing the show on film was the magic answer to all his problems. The film camera could fix everything. After all, his pictures at M-G-M were great. What was the difference?

Red with pretty wife, Georgia, during his record-breaking show in Las Vegas.

There was a good deal of difference, but Skelton never got around to realizing it. He would show up on the day the week's shooting was scheduled. He had glanced through the script. Tossing it aside, he would say, "Well, let's go." And they went—in some seven different directions, none of them the right one. The supporting cast, in many instances, never so much as saw Skelton until the moment they were on-stage together, cameras grinding. A supporting player would know his cues and lines cold, but that was no help with Skelton throwing ad libs in a steady stream.

He switched to film for his second season, but things only became worse. Even the first film of a new season—an important film not only to Skelton but to the entire TV film industry—was no great shakes as entertainment.

Less than half-way through the season, Skelton's stomach caught up with him. At St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica, surgeons performed a major operation. For a brief, frightening time, he was a dying man—and he knew it.

The production staff frantically patched together bits and pieces of both old and unreleased film, rang in guest stars on a live basis and kept what was left of the show on the air. It was a far cry from those first live shows of 1951. The sponsor, understandably fed up, gave notice that it was dropping the show at the end of the season. For Skelton, it was the low point of his long career.

The road back, however, has been a short one—so far. Skelton, a man of considerable physical stamina, came bouncing out of the hospital with remarkable speed. He listened to his friends and took things easy. He came to some sort of mutual agreement with M-G-M whereby he quit and they fired him. And then he headed for the Sahara at Las Vegas.

A Change Of Scenery

The idea behind this grueling two-week personal appearance, oddly enough, was to give Skelton both a change of scenery and a rest. He felt like a million dollars, physically, but he was still mentally tired. He was worried about the miserable season just finished, worried about his future acceptance by the viewers. The reception they gave him at the Sahara was just the tonic he needed. He found both himself and the audience.

His show this year is being run by CBS, and nobody else. The network is gambling a good deal of money in taking Skelton away from NBC—and it is worthy of note that NBC didn't fight very hard to hold him.

What happens to Skelton this season, then, is pretty much up to CBS. Out from under his M-G-M contract, Skelton is willing and ready to devote himself entirely to TV and nothing else. He is going to be as cooperative as the youngest neophyte in the business.

Big Job Ahead

It will be CBS' job to keep him that way, to make sure the producer and director can handle him—both firmly and gently—and to keep writers who can turn out fresh new material for Skelton, not for Willie Lump Lump or Deadeye Dick or Clem Kadiddlehopper or the other characters he has so long been associated with. The real talent is Skelton himself, and the real problem is Skelton himself. If CBS can find material for the one and reins for the other, the Red Skelton Show is a cinch to be back in the top ten before the snow flies.

Otherwise—and nobody knows this better than Richard (Red) Skelton himself—he's through. It's that cut and dried a proposition.—Dan Jenkins.

WESTERN WEBSTER:

Gene Autry's

COWBOY DICTIONARY

HE WAS scratching all the way and he didn't go grabbin' the apple. He had a mean sunfisher that wasn't doing any crow-hops but he didn't eat gravel."

Can't translate that? Then you're a tenderfoot.

Bits of cowboy lingo coined out on the Western ranges, some of them decades ago, have been carried over to modern times and indoor rodeos.

Gene Autry, currently billed as America's favorite cowboy in the World's Championship Rodeo at Madison Square Garden, supplied the lingo.

Now, let Gene translate.

"Scratching" means moving the feet back and forth in a kicking motion while riding a bucking horse.

"It's one of the things a winner in a bronco-riding contest must do," Autry explains. "You know, of course, that a bronco is an unbroken horse and usually mean. 'Bronco is a Spanish word meaning 'rough, harsh, abrupt.' Bucking horses are all of that."

"Grabbin' the apple" is grabbing the horn of the saddle to keep from being thrown, in other words, from "eating gravel."

A "sunfisher" is a bronco that twists its body in the air so that sunlight strikes its belly.

"Crow-hops" are mild—according to rodeo standards—bucking motions.

So you can see that the rider with whom we started this story was making a good ride and probably was given a high score.

More Cowboy Talk

Here's some more of the talk of cowboys. Listen carefully next time you tune in one of your favorite Western shows and you'll note a number of these expressions.

All beef cattle are "cows" to cowboys.

Say to a man: "Roll your bed"—that means he's fired.

A man getting by on credit is "livin' on his jawbone."

Laying down the law to a man is "readin' the Scriptures" to him.

"Taking up a homestead" is another way of eating gravel or, in ordinary talk, being thrown from your horse.

If the chuck wagon, which carries the food and cooking equipment of traveling cowboy outfits, has the materials for the cook to make an open-face pie, the cowboys would call the pie a "boggy top."

"Bogging them in" is when a rider fails to "scratch."

"Broomtail" is a wild mare. "Bulldogging or steer wrestling" is throwing a steer by its horns, subject to rodeo rules.

"Dog-fall" is putting a steer down with its feet under it. The fall is not complete until the steer is flat on its side with all four feet out.

"Hoolihanning" is leaning forward and alighting on the horns of the steer so as to knock it down without twisting the animal down in a wrestling hold. This is barred at most contests. "Pegging" is sticking the steer's horns into the ground, also barred.

Here are some things forbidden in the bronc riding contests: "Pulling leather," or holding on to the saddle with one or both hands, which disqualifies the rider. So does "grabbin' the apple" and "screwing down," which is sinking the spurs into the cinch.

Back to more general subjects, "cavy" is a herd of saddle horses on a round-up.

"Community loop" is an extra-large loop thrown by a roper.

"Hazer" is a mounted man who takes the horse from which a bulldogger has leaped to wrestle a steer and who protects the bulldogger from the steer after it is released.

"Jughead" is a foolish horse.

"Loggering" is holding to the saddle horn.

Cowboy talk, whether on the range or at an indoor rodeo contest, has always been picturesque and some of it carries good advice. For example:

"Never call a man a liar because he knows more'n you do."

'Drive-in theater.'

Smith sees World Series decided by N.Y. pitching

By Red Smith

THE CHICAGO CUBS who won the National League pennant in 1945 had a 13-man pitching staff topped by a couple of big ones, Hank Borowy and Claude Passeau. The others bore names that have somehow escaped Cooperstown—Bob Chipman, Paul Erickson, Ray Prim, Ray Starr, Hi Bithorn, Hank Wyse and so on—but most of them were modest winners and because of their great depth in this department the Cubs were favored to take the Tigers in the World Series.

Borowy did win two games and Passeau one, a one-hitter. For Detroit, Hal Newhouser won twice, Virgil Trucks and Dizzy Trout once each, and the Tigers made off with the World Championship, such as it was.

Up in the pressbox that fall, a lesson was borne in upon some guys who had been watching baseball somewhat longer than briefly. They had needed time to learn, but then, if they'd been quick learners, they wouldn't have been shivering in the pressbox, they'd have been in the Union League Club drinking with the other editors.

The lesson was simply that in a World Series the guys who win for you are your big pitchers, your World Series pitchers—your Newhousers and Trouts and Passeaus, your Deans and Hubbells and Ruffings, your Raschis and Reynoldses.

You don't win with depth because when you've got to go deep for your pitching in a short Series, you're already dead. If you're winning, your nondescripts never warm up.

When this year's Major League champions stand simpering modestly before the Yankee Stadium television cameras for the first time, the Dodgers will be favored to accomplish what no

Red Barber: video expert on the Dodgers.

Brooklyn team has done since this peculiar pastime was spawned on the borough's Elysian Fields, June 19, 1846.

The Dodgers will be the favorites on the theory that they have a stronger team than the Yankees. Maybe they have. Probably they have, for they have a good deal more batting power than New York, at least as much speed and just as reliable a defense.

Nevertheless, the pick here is New York. New York by the hardest road in seven difficult games. Brooklyn does not have—or does not now appear to have, the big pitchers, the big World Series pitchers.

There is, to be sure, legitimate question as to whether the Yankees' big guys are as big this fall as their names suggest. At least, though, they have been and the others haven't.

In Brooklyn, Charley Dressen has depended on depth all summer. Except when he had Carl Erskine going, the Dodgers' manager has made quantity serve instead of quality, employing three or four men in the bullpen to succor his starting pitcher.

Erskine is a good pitcher who might beat the Yankees or anybody else. The lefthanded Preacher Roe could win, for the Yankees have had trouble with lefthanders all season. There is no confidence here that the others can measure up to Series specifications.

Looking down the Yankee bench, Casey Stengel will find Vic Raschi, Ed Lopat, Allie Reynolds, Whitey Ford and some business associates of good repute. To the Dodgers they'll look like big ones, anyway, with the possible exception of Lopat.

Lopat is a lefthander without great speed. He has had trouble in the past with Brooklyn's formidable lineup of righthanded hitters. He has also beaten Brooklyn, once.

Reynolds may be the key. At various times this summer he had miseries in his back, his legs, his arm, which is the reason he was employed more often as a reliever working a few innings at a time than as a starter trying to go nine.

Allie's ailments need not encourage Mel Allen: television voice of the Yanks.

Brooklyn overmuch. He didn't become a no-hit pitcher until he developed bone chips that rattled like castanets. An ailing Reynolds can bear a striking resemblance to a wounded buffalo.

TV's Week: Because of numerous requests received from Chicago and Milwaukee viewers, TV GUIDE with this issue launches its combined Chicago-Milwaukee program listings. Milwaukee channels 2 (WTMJ-TV) and 25 (WCAN-TV) are identified by boxes around the channel numbers.

Congratulations to Frazer Thomas and his playmate, a goose who thinks he's king. The team passed it's first anniversary on WBBM-TV this week. Frazer, incidentally, has picked up a number of lady fans through his new emcee stint on Petticoat Party (3 PM, Monday through Friday on Channel 2). The pudgy laugh-getter, however, conducts this TV session minus the services of Mr. Garfield.

Thomas

After several months of negotiating, Alex Dreier finally brought his Man On The Go to WNBQ (9:45 PM Tuesdays). Dreier's dramatic presentation adds a fresh interpretation to sometimes dull news shows. His first program elicited this comment from a bopster: "Man, that Man On The Go is real gone!"

Jack Eigen's new Girl Friday is Diana Davis, shapely blonde model who was recently named WBKB's Miss Power Increase. Incidentally, the only casualty reported from Channel 7's 300 per cent power increase came from a Chicago woman who reported the boost had caused her tube to explode.

Sight to Behold: RCA-Victor's recent color TV demonstration for the Midwest press drew raves. It's the "compatible" kind—i.e., receivable in black and white on standard sets. More NBC shows are on the color agenda for limited showings.

WBBM-TV, the infant in Chicago television, scored a scoop on its big brother stations when it covered the dramatic rescue last week of that would-be suicide victim, Millicent Armin. Channel 2's Ray Rayner described the event in an emotion-choked voice while WBBM-TV trained its cameras on the 19th floor of the Tribune Tower.

Advance Tips on Shows: When Bishop Fulton J. Sheen returns to WGN-TV (DuMont network) Oct. 13, he'll have the distinction of being seen on the largest TV hook-up in the history of the medium—over 120 stations have signed up for the Bishop's chats.

A new kiddies show is in Chicago's TV future. Bill Howard, an import from Baltimore, brings his children's amateur dance productions to WBBM-TV at 10:15 AM Saturdays, beginning Oct. 24. Bill has the necessary experience—he's an Astaire dance studio manager.

Sheen

Shows in the Works: WGN-TV is lining up a Monday-through-Friday educational series from 1:30 to 2 PM. Participating schools will be Loyola University, Illinois Institute of Technology and Chicago Public Schools. A junior edition of news for teen-agers (5 to 5:15 PM daily) is also on Channel 9's agenda. No date set for either as yet.

There's a strong rumor in the wind that WGN-TV's Jack Brickhouse may emcee a daily afternoon variety show on Channel 9.

BIRTH OF A STATION

Milwaukee Fans Greet WCAN-TV

ON THE evening of September 6 in Milwaukee, a race against time was climaxed in dramatic fashion when a crew of construction men toiled far into the night to finish the huge antenna tower for Milwaukee's new television station, WCAN-TV. The men were hurrying to meet the Labor Day deadline that had been set as the starting date for operations. One hour and 30 minutes before "D-Day," the installation job was completed, and a few minutes later at 11:40 PM, WCAN-TV began transmitting its first test pattern.

That same hectic night, the first live show was staged. Hal Walker, a staff announcer, stepped before the cameras to interview the tired but triumphant steeplejacks on their arduous task of raising the tower to a height of 697 feet above the ground from the roof of the Hotel Schroeder in the heart of town.

Thus Milwaukee's second TV station debuted almost six years after its first — WTMJ-TV — came into being. The actual birth of the new unit, which transmits in the UHF or ultra high frequency range, covered a more normal span, nearly nine months. It was on February 11 of this year that the Midwest Broadcasting Co., owner of local radio station WCAN, was given a valentine in the form of an okay from the FCC to operate a commercial TV station in Milwaukee on Channel 25.

Publicity Pays Off

With that hurdle hurdled, WCAN-TV's staff got busy. Through ad campaigns and publicity drives, through every media and method, they began educating the public—and the press—on UHF. The tubthumping had an ulterior motive. It was designed to convince televiewers they should invest more money to have their sets adapted to UHF. Apparently this sales job was masterfully done. Recent station surveys testify that there are upward of 100,000 sets in and about Milwaukee able to get WCAN-TV.

To house the new TV studios, WCAN radio facilities were shifted to a suburb (Hales Corners) 13 miles from the Home of the Braves. Its upstart sister station then took over the choice "downtown" location in the Towne Hotel.

In August, WCAN-TV scored another coup of sorts when they became affiliated with the CBS-TV network. With the tie-up, Channel 25 inherited such rich legacies as Arthur Godfrey, Fred Waring and I Love Lucy. Some of these programs were snatched from WTMJ-TV.

Million Dollar Baby

Yet there were headaches, too. For example, when all costs for cameras, fixtures and equipment had been tallied, station bigwigs found their brainchild had grown up to be a Gargantua in which $1,000,000 was invested.

In charge of doling out these hefty expenditures was WCAN-TV's general manager Lou Poller, who (by no mere coincidence) happens to be chief stockholder in the Midwest Broadcasting Co. A "boy wonder" brand of businessman, Poller crashed radio at 16 as a CBS sportscaster in Scranton, Pa. Before he was 40, he had built two stations of his own. Energetic and enthusiastic, Poller, who says he is trying to "patent a 36-hour working day and a 10-day working week," has the simplest of credos: "Keep viewers and advertisers happy."

Aiding and abetting Poller as assistant general manager has been another Pennsylvanian, Elmer Jaspan.

In hopes of pulling an audience of more than puny proportions, the emphasis in the impressive line-up of local shows (to which seven hours daily programming is devoted) is on variety of fare. To get the whole family into the act, here's a typical trio. For Father, scholarly Dr. Adolph Suppan's news show; for teen-aged Jack and Jill, Ted Clark's disk jockey opus; for Mother, the AM cooking and home economics session called Fetching Food.

On camera: pretty Mary Jane Jung, WCAN-TV's weather girl. Studio space is compact but not cramped.

Still Scheduling Shows

WCAN-TV officials quickly admit, however, that there are still a sizable number of "holes" in its program schedule. Room must be found for many top CBS shows on the agenda. But with the frantic rush to get started behind them, these UHF pioneers can just about say —"It's all over but the shooting!"

SPORTSCAST

by ED PAZDUR

Chicago is slated for another title fight next month. Brittle-boned Johnny Bratton, who dropped his title to Kid Gavilan in 1951, will get a crack at Gavilan's crown at the Chicago Stadium about mid-November.

When Sugar Ray Robinson stepped into the middleweight class back in 1951, Bratton brutally battered Charlie Fusari to claim the vacant NBA crown. Then, two months later, Johnny entered the ring in a title-defense match with Gavilan. He led the Havana Hawk on points going into the eighth round when he stuck out his glass jaw and Gavilan gleefully fractured it. The Kid won the title handily after that and remained a great champion ever since.

Barry

Ringside notes: Noticed Pabst exec Nate Pearlstein straining his neck over Jack Drees' shoulder to catch Pabst commercials between rounds on Jack's ringside TV monitor... Two rabid boxing fans you'll always see at ringside are WBKB's Jack Eigen and Morris B. Sachs. They never miss a stadium bout.

Handsome Norm Barry, Channel 5's sportscaster, seems to have captured the ladies' fancy. In response to many inquiries, we're sorry to report Barry is married.

Cuffnotes: WCAN-TV, Milwaukee's first UHF station, set some sort of record by originating a network sportscast only a week after it went on the air. With Elmer Jaspan supervising, Red Barber's show Peak Of Sports was smoothly staged there... Marv Bell, star of WTMJ-TV's Inside Football show, coached Marquette University's frosh gridders and varsity ends for seven years. That easily explains his authoritative reporting.

Phil Kim vs. Arthur Persley, (lightweights).
JIMMY POWERS' RATINGS: Kim is rated eighth. Fights, 49. Won, 40. Lost 7. Draws, 2. K.O.'s, 27. Persley is rated 10th. Fights, 45. Won 40. Lost, 3. Draws, 2. K.O.'s, 10. Kim showed he is to be reckoned with as a leading lightweight contender when he kayoed Virgil Akins on August 29th. The Hawaiian is a two-fisted performer who carries a mean sock in either hand. Persley is a tough nut and this bout will give a better insight on Kim. Persley looked like a comer until he ran into Orlando Zulueta at the Garden on July 8th. I'll string along with Kim.

TOP RADIO PROGRAMS FLOCK BACK TO "Q"

by WM. A. QUE

Likely as not, many of you have missed your favorite radio programs during the summer layoff. Now, however, is the time to file back ...most of the big WMAQ shows have returned to provide another season of easy-to-take (just lend an ear...not the entire anatomy) entertainment.

Groucho

You Bet Your Life, starring the mustachioed member of the Marx clan, is offering its steady share of new puns and fun at 8:00 on Wednesday nights. Immediately following (at 8:30 PM, Wednesdays) it's The Big Story for dramatic enactment of journalism's finest feats.

Make a note to catch up with these Thursday switches: Ralph Edwards' impish antics find an outlet on Truth or Consequences at 8:00 PM; an hour later, Eddie Cantor is on the air with all-time musical favorites and a storehouse of reminiscences about show business and show people.

Phil & Alice

By transferring a couple of undisputed favorites, WMAQ has fattened up its Friday night fare for your enjoyment. A busy Bob Hope is dreaming up new gags and comedy for the Bob Hope Show (nighttime division) at 7:30 Friday nights. Julius Abruzzio, Elliot Lewis (alias Frankie Remley), Phil and Alice—the whole gang from the Phil Harris-Alice Faye Show are now broadcasting their own brand of fun and song at 8:00, Friday nights.

These favorites are all back on WMAQ. Set your dial at 670 and enjoy 'em!

Marvin Edelman vs. Jimmy Herring, (middleweights).
Edelman is unrated. Fights, 34. Won, 32. Lost, 2. K. O.'s, 17. Herring is unrated: Fights, 71. Won, 60. Lost, 9. Draws, 2. K.O.'s, 23. Edelman looked like a good prospect until they put him in with Tiger Jones last February. He was stopped in nine. Herring, against the same Jones, has been able to hold his own. Edelman looked like a rugged customer in his only previous TV showing and knowing Herring's dislike for the tough ones makes me give the Philadelphian the nod.

9:00 2 [4] [25] BOXING—Detroit
Gil Turner vs. Italo Scortichini (welterweights).
JIMMY POWERS' RATINGS: Turner is rated second. Fights, 42. Won, 39. Lost, 3. K.O.'s, 29. Scortichini is unrated. Fights, 39. Won, 31. Lost, 6. Draws, 2. K.O.'s, 9. Turner along with Johnny Bratton is top in this class headed by champion Kid Gavilan. Gil's inside power with real sock in either hand is tough opposition for anyone. Scortichini showed in this same ring against Gavilan on June 10th and although a loser, he went the route. Turner is a big favorite here and maybe against the Kid if they should meet again.

TV Teletype*

HOLLYWOOD Dan Jenkins reports:

The Lucille Ball—Communist Probe Story

ON SUNDAY night, September 6, Walter Winchell included in his weekly telecast an item to the effect that "a top television actress" would soon be confronted with her Communist Party card. His emphasis on the word "top" left little doubt that he was referring to Lucille Ball, co-star with her husband, Desi Arnaz, in the Nation's top-rated show, I Love Lucy.

On Sunday night, September 13, one week later, Winchell gave Lucille Ball as clean a bill of health as any commentator has ever given anyone on any subject. What happened during the intervening seven days, however, was a nightmare the likes of which few innocent people are called upon to face.

For several days following Winchell's September 6 telecast there was an uneasy quiet. He had not identified Lucille Ball by name, and nobody else was about to without concrete evidence firmly in hand. On Friday, September 11, however, the Los Angeles Herald-Express (which is Winchell's Los Angeles outlet), broke the story. Its evidence: a photostatted copy of a 1936 registration card on which Lucille Ball had indicated her intention to vote for the Communist Party candidates in the 1936 elections.

That Friday, by a coincidence, was the day Lucy and Desi were to film their first I Love Lucy episode since returning from a summer vacation. The filming was scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. before a studio audience of 300 people at Motion Picture Center studios.

At 6 p.m. Friday, Rep. Donald L. Jackson (R) Cal., Chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, told a press conference that the committee was satisfied that Miss Ball "had never had a role in the Communist Party."

At 7:30 p.m. Friday, Desi Arnaz paced back and forth in his office at Motion Picture Center. With him were Harry Ackerman, CBS vice-president; Martin Leeds, executive vice president of Desilu Productions, and this writer and his wife, who happened to be wearing a red cashmere sweater.

"Pat," Desi said, swearing amiably at an old friend, "for gossakes did you have to wear a sweater that color?"

Ackerman, who was carrying the network on his shoulders, also was under a strain. He, more than any other single CBS executive, was responsible for putting I Love Lucy on the air in the first place. And it was his personal decision, on that fateful Friday when the story broke, to back Lucy and Desi 100 percent—before he knew the whole story.

At a few minutes past 8, Desi stepped through a door on the set and faced 300 people seated in bleachers extending the entire width of the huge soundstage. He had a little trouble with the door and laughed nervously about it.

"Welcome to the first I Love Lucy show of the season," he said. "We are glad to have you back and we are glad to be back ourselves. But before we go on, I want to talk to you about something serious. Something very serious. You all know what it is. The papers have been full of it all day."

He paused, and his lower lip began to quiver. "Lucille is no Communist," he blurted out. "We both despise the Communists and everythin' they stand for."

Desi is an emotional Latin. His eyes now had filled with tears and his voice was shaking. He was angry.

"Lucille is 100 percent an American," he went on, his voice rising a little. "She is as American as Barney Baruch and Ike Eisenhower. And last November we both voted for Ike Eisenhower. Tomorrow mornin' the complete transcript of Lucille's testimony will be released to the papers and you can read it for yourself. Then you will know this is all a pack of lies."

The audience gave him an ovation. One man shouted, "We're with you, boy!" and Desi turned, looked over in the man's direction, and said, "Thank you."

Calmed down, Desi introduced Bill Frawley and Vivian Vance. He was now in control of himself and was approaching the really tough moment—the introduction of Lucy.

"And now," he said, his voice quite calm, "I want you to meet my favorite wife—my favorite redhead—in fact, that's the only thing red about her, and even that's not legitimate—Lucille Ball."

Lucy stepped quietly out from behind a door at the rear of the set. The heavy make-up for the show concealed the lines of worry and strain. She had been in seclusion in her dressing room most of the afternoon and had spoken to no one but Desi and a few close friends. She was smiling, but it was a set smile. She got her answer in short order—an ovation. Still smiling, she punched the air, lightly, with both hands, as though to say, "We'll fight this thing out," bowed easily and went through the door.

When it was over, the two of them came out arm in arm and asked each of the supporting players to take a bow. Then Lucy stood alone with Desi for a moment, looked at the audience and said, "Goodnight, God bless—and thank you." It was a long walk offstage, clear across the width of the studio. She received an ovation every step of the way. When she got back to her dressing room, she broke down and cried her heart out.

The next day, Saturday, Lucy and Desi held an informal press conference at their ranch home in Chatsworth, 25 miles out in the San Fernando Valley.

It was not an easy session for either of them, but they both were in control of the situation. Lucy was wound up like a watch, but she spoke easily and clearly. Whenever she appeared uncertain, Desi stepped into the breach. While it was apparent that the press was on their side, the newspapermen nevertheless had a job to do, and they did it. Some of the questions were pointedly searching. It was obvious, however, that Lucy had a clear conscience, her most valuable asset throughout the entire ordeal. And it was Desi who explained, much in the vein of a Clarence Day, their trials and tribulations with Grandpa Hunt, the harmless old man who wanted nothing more than a better world for everybody. It was to humor him that Lucille and her mother and brother, 17 years ago, had registered to vote for a Communist candidate. And that, when the whole unhappy story was boiled down, was all it amounted to.

With the press beginning to run out of questions, a reporter rose from his canvas camp chair and faced his colleagues. "I think," he said, "we owe both of them a vote of thanks. And I think a lot of people owe them an apology."

The apology that counted came the following night on Winchell's telecast. The ordeal was over and the record was clear.

The Real 'Mama'

Peggy Wood's Role Is All Acting

PEGGY WOOD, TV's Mama, plays her best role off stage. The fictional prototype of the poor but good immigrant, is very much the gracious grande dame of the theater.

In the best old-stage tradition, she surrounds herself with personal maids who comb out her long blonde hair or lace her into her shoes. She lives in a comfortable, air-conditioned, Eighteenth-Century-decorated Park Avenue apartment. Any conflicts that arise out of the dual personalities of Mrs. Hanson and Peggy Wood are easily resolved. She says: "I just don't let Mama rub off on me."

As Mrs. William Walling, the wife of a printing firm executive, she leads the life most people think all New Yorkers lead—and the life most New Yorkers would like to lead. Summers are spent traveling, abroad when time permits. The rest of the year she shuttles each weekend from Park Avenue to Connecticut where she has a large house on a medium-sized estate, including a swimming pool and a private lake. Devotees of the theater, concerts and art, the Wallings throw themselves wholeheartedly into the literary circles of the printing business and into the artistic circles of the theatrical world.

Played The Gamut

A working member of the theater since 1911, (an unflattering number of years since she's just 61) she has played the gamut from second-line chorus to Shakespearean leads. "I've arrived at the point where none of my roles affect me," she says. "I don't even remember words away from the theater."

The idea that an actress must "be" the part she plays seems ridiculous to her. "An actress's own personality is the core of what she plays. If you're absolutely the part, you lose your own identity."

She recounted a "knock-down, drag-out" fight she witnessed, presumably of wits, between Noel Coward and the ex-motion-picture-star, Francis Lederer. "Francis 'be'd' his roles so much, he 'be'd' himself right out of the profession," she said. "Actors suffer from too much identification. Karloff, for instance, is one of the sweetest persons I've ever known, and so intelligent, yet to the public, his name is synonymous with horror."

Proud Of American Heritage

Peggy then asked, "Whoever thought that I, with my background, could play a Norwegian immigrant?" As Mama, she is the wife of a carpenter and a woman who wants only to instill in her children a wholesome philosophy. As Peggy, she is the daughter of the late Eugene Wood, a one-time feature writer for the old New York World. Her American heritage dates back to the Revolutionary War, a fact she impresses upon people.

But Peggy is primarily an actress and she gives warmth to the role of Mama. As testimony to the widespread popularity of the show, Peggy was presented to King Haakon of Norway last year. He decorated her with the Royal St. Olav medal for her work in bettering the cultural relations of Norway with other countries.

Although she hasn't taken Mama into her Park Avenue apartment, since she created the role for TV she has been studying Norwegian. This past summer, she visited her "adopted" birthplace for the second time. "That's being realistic," according to Peggy.

If Mama Hanson is symbolic of anyone, it's probably of the Brooklyn-born Peggy's own mother. "My mother was of the same school of ethics," she believes, "although Mother Wood was more modern. Actually, all women weren't confined to rocking chairs, gazing soulfully off to the side like a Whistler painting."

The simple mechanics of living have changed so drastically since the era of Mama, Peggy's remembrances of her childhood help keep the production true to life. "I needed a nutmeg-grater for a scene," she recalls, "and no one knew what it was supposed to look like. 'Props' (the property department, in charge of stage settings) brought me a French pepper mill. I insist on authenticity, so I had to find one myself."

To Peggy, her profession is a way of life. She's vice-president of the and co-authored, with Drama Critic Ward Morehouse, a play, Miss Quis, in which she starred during its Broadway run. In 1936, she wrote a novel, Star Wagon, and more recently, she penned her memoirs in a book called How Young You Look.

This last is an ironic title meant for all those people who tell her that. "They unconsciously mean," Peggy explains, "Good Heavens, are you

American National Theater and Academy and of the Episcopal Actors Guild; is a former vice-president of Actor's Equity and has been a member of its council these last 25 years. She's also on the national board of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

The urbane lady of the stage is a mama in real life and a grandmother twice. Her son, David Weaver, is the offspring of a previous marriage to the late John V. A. Weaver.

Peggy, too, is a member of the literati. In the Thirties, she wrote Actors and People, a volume of reminiscences, still around? You must be at least 93."

She believes that maturity should come as a happy event for most women, because with it, life offers more than ever before. "The great part of belonging to the theater," she confesses, "is that age is no handicap." Effie Shannon, a veteran of the stage (last seen on Broadway in Arsenic and Old Lace) once said, "I'm so proud of my profession. Where else can a woman hold down a job at 70?"

"That's just the way I feel about it," Peggy says. "I've got a good number of years ahead of me before I throw in the towel."

DR. WALLACE GOBETZ, an eminent psychologist and director of the New York University Testing and Advisement Center, has drawn up a test to help you determine whether you are a TV high-brow, middle-brow, or low-brow.

After outstanding TV critics were polled to establish a solid basis for the questions, and after a representative group of viewers took sample tests, Dr. Gobetz' findings jelled into the self-scoring, high-brow, middle-brow, low-brow TV questionnaire printed below.

All Matter Of Taste

The "brow" classifications were popularized by Writer Russell Lynes who penned some amusing magazine pieces based on his contention that the old caste systems dictated by wealth and background have vanished. Nowadays, Lynes said, a person is judged by his fellow man on the basis of his personal tastes.

Dr. Gobetz used Lynes' "brow" terms for this TV test, which is simply a way to measure personal viewing tastes. A bank president might score as a low-brow, a college professor as a middle-brow, and a hobo as a high-brow. The classifications are on a basis of tastes, not social status.

Square To Longhair

Oh yes, and Dr. Gobetz had some scoring groups left over, so he labeled them "longhair" and "square," a longhair being a step beyond a high-brow and a square a step beyond a low-brow.

Your score will surprise you. One of our writing staff, a real brain trust, came up "square." And the office boy —you guessed it—an unmistakable "longhair."

In taking the test, be sure to make a selection IN EVERY INSTANCE. Some choices will be difficult, but an unanswered question will invalidate your final total.

After you have completed the test, turn to the scoring key on page 21.

14. A. You Bet Your Life; B. Beat the Clock; C. Down You Go; D. Two For The Money.

Group Three: Circle the appropriate answer for each of the following 11 questions.

15. On which of the following days do you watch more TV?

A. Thursday; B. Sunday; C. About Same Every Day; D. Monday.

16. Do you watch midnight movies?
A. Yes; B. No.

17. Have you ever written a fan letter to a TV personality?
A. Yes; B. No.

18. Do you argue with other members of your family over choice of programs?
A. Yes; B. No.

19. Are you a "channel switcher" during commercials?
A. Yes; B. No.

20. Do you ever watch TV and eat dinner at the same time?
A. Yes; B. No.

21. When invited guests come over do you ALWAYS turn off your set?
A. No; B. Yes.

22. Have you found that television is your main source of entertainment?
A. Yes; B. No.

23. Were you disturbed when last year's political conventions interfered with your favorite programs?
A. Yes; B. No.

24. Are your viewing habits at all affected by TV critics opinions?
A. No; B. Yes.

25. Would you rather see a good movie than watch TV all evening?
A. No; B. Yes.

What They Like In LOS ANGELES

WHEN it comes to local shows, Los Angeles television fans would appear to like nothing better than music. All of the three top shows in the Los Angeles area specialize in that commodity.

Lawrence Welk, now in his 25th year as an accordion player and front man for a band, has been leading the Los Angeles hit parade for the past two years with an hour-long show on Friday nights out of KTLA. He plays from the Aragon ballroom, where he is now in his 110th consecutive week.

Ina Ray Hutton presents her all-girl band and as many variety acts as can be crowded into an hour on Tuesday night over the same station. The variety acts are 100 percent female and the commercials are handled by girl announcers. Ina Ray, a bouncing blonde with no inhibitions, will be seen via kinescope in some other parts of the country.

Los Angeles' third favorite is Peter Potter, an Oklahoma-born disc jockey, who presents Juke Box Jury, a musical panel show, over Station KNXT. His panelists have to score as hits or misses six brand-new record releases from the major companies.

FORECAST-FURS

COME fall and winter, a woman's thoughts turn toward fur. And since, unfortunately, everybody cannot have a fur coat or what we call a "large" fur, this is the year of the "little" fur, or, a fur accessory which can be made in anything from the most costly sable to imitation furs of all kinds. And, the wonderful part about them is they are not fastened to any one costume but can be worn with many changes.

One favorite is the narrow band of fur on gloves which can make a suit or day dress much more elegant. Then there is the fur ascot with a fringed edge which can also be worn as a scarf tucked through your belt.

Separate Fur Cuffs

Another snap-on idea is the separate fur cuffs which can snap or hook on, or can be fastened with large gold buttons or cuff links.

For flat furs, the fur belt with detachable reticule is perhaps best used with slim, dark dresses. We saw one the other day in leopard, worn with a dark hunter's green wool dress with slim skirt.

And, of course, in the nonsense department or for very cold climate, the earmuffs are being revived.

The one really extravagant idea which still can be done in fur cloth is the fur petticoat which can be used also as an overskirt at home or for cold winter evenings.

P.S. The latest bulletin is: "Fur Garters!"

Reviews/Pentagon, U.S.A.

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

Beer and frauleins are incidental to job of trapping ex-Nazis.

IT WAS probably inevitable that a show like Pentagon, U.S.A. would make its way into TV. After all, the Pentagon had about the only file of "secret cases" still untapped by TV writers.

Anyway, except for this seeming lack of originality, Pentagon rates as a good whodunit series. Perhaps it's just a welcome relief to see the assorted private eye characters hawkshawing around in GI uniforms for a change. But the scripts have been interesting and actually, the work of the Army's Criminal Investigation Division is important and merits attention, even if only on a TV show.

The series to date has concentrated on crimes supposedly committed by or against our occupation forces in Western Germany and other European countries. This has permitted the writers to deal with ex-Nazis, neo-Fascists and other political criminals now menacing the Allied front in Europe. In addition, the European backgrounds give the show a certain exotic quality. It's to be expected, of course, that Pentagon will also turn its attention to CID cases in this country.

With the exception of Robert Pastene, who plays an Army colonel and introduces each week's story, the casts vary from show to show. Most of the actors are veterans of other TV dramatic series and know their way around the dialogue. Several times, though, they have given evidence of insufficient rehearsal, with members of the cast missing their cues or flubbing their camera positions.

Ann Sheridan: among show's film stars.

Video Theater

LOGICAL offspring of the venerable Lux Radio Theater, which this season celebrates its 20th anniversary, is the new Lux Video Theater.

But where the radio show concentrates almost exclusively on adaptations of famous movies, the TV version has branched off in another direction, featuring original plays or adaptations of one-act dramas and novels. Video Theater does match the radio version, though, in casting movie stars in its lead roles, and generally rates as one of the better half-hour dramatic series on TV (CBS).

Because of the emphasis on movie stars, the show has moved from New York to Hollywood, where it will be able to get more top names.

The program generally follows the pattern of other TV dramatic shows by featuring all phases of drama. Under the expert guidance of Producer Calvin Kuhl, the writers, actors and others involved in each week's production imbue the show with much of the slickness usually attributed to Hollywood output. This makes the good stories that much better, and serves to make even a second-rate yarn highly entertaining.

There have been numerous rumors that Video Theater will be expanded to a full hour. This could mean even greater improvement, since it would end the necessity of condensing a well-known play, movie or novel into the half-hour format.

FINE TUNING

By OLLIE CRAWFORD

WORLD SERIES draws huge television audience. It's a return of that popular show "What's My Lineup."

Like some other shows, the World Series is back with the same familiar cast.

The difference is that the Dodgers want to rewrite last year's script. They're holding out for a surprise ending where nobody jumps off the Brooklyn Bridge. This would be as big a surprise as a TV movie in which Gene Autry DOESN'T get off the railroad track in time.

This is one week when the ratings show Play Ball higher than Lucille Ball.

Baseball on TV still confuses Dumb Dora. She thinks a second-sacker is a guy with two bags of peanuts. She thinks the shortstop is where a guy rests while running from second to third. Dora figures the batter on deck ought to wear a sailor suit. She thinks a foul tip is anything less than a quarter.

All she knows about the base-line is that Dior said it would be higher this year.

On one hit, the umpire yelled "Fair," and Dora said she thought it was excellent.
